

WSQ Assess Air Conditioning and Mechanical Ventilation Systems

Introduction

The Singapore Workforce Skills Qualifications (WSQ) system is a national framework developed by the Singapore Workforce Development Agency (WDA) for adult workers to increase their competency and add value to the industries by taking up continuing education and training modules. WSQ caters to adult workers and aims to make skills upgrading accessible to the workforce as well as assist them in the advancement and development of their career.

SEAS is accredited by the Singapore Workforce Development Agency (WDA) to conduct WSQ modules in Energy Management.

Objective of module

On completion of the module, learners will have the:

- Knowledge and application skills required to assess air conditioning and mechanical ventilation systems
- Assess indoor air quality and its relationship with ACMV systems; and
- Determine methods to reduce energy consumption in ACMV systems.

Module Outline

1. Interpret the provisions in the code of practice and their applications to provide a comfortable indoor environment.
2. Determine ACMV systems to provide cooling and dehumidification functions
3. Determine measures to be incorporated into an ACMV design to improve indoor air quality
4. Specify energy conservation measures relating to different components of ACMV systems
5. Calculate the energy savings potential of the measures implemented.
6. Collate relevant specification data relating to components of ACMV systems and submit preliminary report, according to organisational procedures.
